NEWS of the WEEK

WARY RADIO CHAINS
New York City--One of the Republic's biggest headaches is President Roosevelt's magnetic personality. One of G. O. P. Campaign Committee's major worries is how to answer him. When James Sabin tried to buy $1,000,000 worth of radio time for "Liberty the Crossroads," a Republican campaign fantasy, he met refusal both big networks (NBC and CBS) sell any time to either party until after conventions have named candidates. In the meantime both networks will continue donate limited time to party without charge.

IN LOVE WITH JAIL
Albany, Ala.--A local prisoner who stayed right on in jail, now authorities are trying to get for 11 years' board and care.

SOME CAGEY ANSWERS
New York City--Among questions of applicants for local relief is "Is your marital status?" Typical replies from the "cagey" are: "Very good," "Normal," "Wear" and "Chief Ad."

FILED DOGS FREE TRUSTY
Birmingham, Ala.--So sure was Warden Leon Debardeleben of his bloodhounds' scent that he told authorities to turn Debardeleben, a trusty, loose for a ratnastorm came up, the dog lost the trail--and Wilson was heard from since!

INDIAN ON WAR PATH
Alto, Cal.--Dale Beedle, 20, sold tackle for Stanford University, pushed a button in a cafe on his way home from the Rose game, ordered two bottles of beer, two glasses of orange juice, bottles of milk and a "malted," he got his bill for $1.30 he tried to toss bottles and glasses through the windows; gathered a crowd of passengers as he tore through the train and threw them; at a sanitarium an examining physician said the "excitement of the game was too much for him."

BEST CITY CHANGES NAME
Santa Domingo, Haiti--This, the last existing white settlement in New World, named in 1496 after the patron saint of Columbus's son, will hereafter be known as San Trujillo (Trujillo City). Among the present Dictator Raul Leonidas Trujillo y Molina, deposing his subjects, the President said: "I'm no Mark Antony. I'm not words. If I were Nero I'd burn down Santo Domingo and rebuild it more beautifully."

"BOOTS" ARRIVES HOME
New York City--Three days before his divorce from Mary Pickford became final, Douglas Fairbanks arrived, full of plans for his new production of "Marco Polo" for the screen. During six months abroad the star was most completely photographed in costume by Lady Sylvia Ashley, whose husband named "Doug" in his suit of armor.

TAX COLLECTION MOUNT
Washington, D. C.--The Treasury Department announces that Federal taxes for the fiscal year 1934-35 total $2,229,435,573. This is $250,000,000 more than the equal intervals for the year 1931-32.

LUCKY YOUNGSTERS
New York City--Three days before his divorce from Mary Pickford became final, Douglas Fairbanks arrived, full of plans for his new production of "Marco Polo" for the screen. During six months abroad the star was most completely photographed in costume by Lady Sylvia Ashley, whose husband named "Doug" in his suit of armor.

MEXICO HIGH PINTOS PLAY GOULD FRIDAY NIGHT

The always colorful Mexico High Pintos will invade the Gould campus to play a double-header here Friday night. The second teams will mix at 7:15 with the varsity affair starting about 8:30.

For the past few weeks the visitors have been playing without the services of their star forward, Tom Muir, who has been ill. Muir is by far Mexico's best and should be back in the lineup this week. Gould will have hands-full just trying to stop him. Gaudette, the other starting Pinto forward, was out of action last week, too, and still Mexico was able to hold the strong Farmington Club to only a 10-point victory. It looks as though Gould is in for trouble on Friday when Mexico arrives, whether with or without their star men.

The Gould team has picked up a good deal since vacation and should they hit a winning stride a good game can be contemplated. The Gould-Mexico series includes more thrilling games in the last eight years than any series of games played with all Gould's rivals.

The starting lineup will probably find Brown and Wentzell at forwards, Daniels at center, and Brown and E. Robertson at guards. O. Robertson and Quimby will also see action.

GUILD TO PRESENT NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT

The Junior Guild of the Congregational Church has started its work for 1936 with an enthusiastic membership of 48, although its "membership drive" will not close until February. On Thursday evening, January 30 an entertainment will be presented in Odeon Hall under the direction of Mrs. Madeline Dudley, Miss Lucia Van, Miss Harriet Merrill and Mrs. Marjorie Thompson. The main feature will be "A Costume Show of Now and Then" which is a fashion revue contrasting old and modern styles. A reader and twenty other characters will comprise the cast.

There will also be a short skit "A Midnight Fantasy." Music will be provided by the Guild Orchestra and Chorus, directed by Mrs. Doris Lord, assisted by Mrs. Mona Wentzell and Mrs. Mildred Lyon. The publicity committee consists of Mrs. Blanch Howe, Mrs. Olive Head and Mrs. Frances Crane.

BETHEL AND VICINITY

Motor traffic was nearly stopped Wednesday night when a heavy rain made the roads smooth and washed away the sand in icy places.

Twelve tables were in play at the Rebekahs card party Wednesday night. First prizes were won by Robert Kirk and Miss Edna McMillin, consolation by Frank Hunt and Mrs. E. E. Bennett.

Work on the new road at South Bethel was finished for this season on Tuesday. In spite of the cold and snow much has been accomplished, including the fill across the present road east of the Hawthorne place.

CHILDREN MAY SLIDE ON HIGH STREET

It has been decided that High Street may be used for sliding. Stop signs will be erected on Brighton Avenue and Elm Street, so that motorists should use caution before entering or crossing High Street. The safer method, and probably one which will prevail, will be to travel other routes to reach places in that section. It can be done with little inconvenience by all.

EVERETT CROSS UNDERGOES OPERATION ON EYE

Everett Cross of Greenwood is at the Eye and Ear Infirmary in Portland where it is understood he underwent an operation on his left eye Thursday morning. The reason for the operation was a ruptured pupil, the result of an accident the Friday following Christmas. On that day, while working in the woods on Pine Mountain he was struck in the eye by a chip. It was a painful blow, but not considered serious at the time. He was given first aid by his partner, Ross, at home and taken home. It was after consulting local doctors that he went to Portland. His friends hope the operation proves a success and that he is soon back with them.

WOODSTOCK AND EAST BETHEL MEN'S FARM BUREAU MEET

Two men's Farm Bureau organizations met last week to elect officers and plan their program of Extension work for 1936.

The first of these meetings was at Woodstock. This community started a new men's group this year. Men elected on the community committee were: H. O. Jundt, Chairman; Oscar Twitchell and Floyd A. Redman, Projects, which were of great interest to the men were: farm and poultry accounts, better quality produce, better prices, need and increase in income with poultry.

Last Bethel was one of the three communities that asked for a men's planning meeting instead of electing its committee and planning a program according to the plan adopted at annual meeting. The following men were elected on the committee: Guy Bartlett, Chairman; Robert D. Hastings, Ceylan Kimball, Lealle Noyes and J. C. Bartlett.

The community was well represented at the meeting and a full program of work was planned. Projects which attracted special interest were farm accounts, farm credit, better quality roughage, pasture improvement, the poultry projects, and all available information on the growing of potatoes.

GRANGE RADIO BROADCAST ON SATURDAY, JANUARY 18

An especially attractive radio program is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, January 18, during the hour allotted for the monthly Grange broadcast during the regular Farm and Home hour, starting at 12:30 Eastern Standard Time.

Louis J. Taber, Master of the National Grange, is scheduled for the principal address and may be expected to give some timely comments on the recent Supreme Court decision outlawing the A. A. A. The executive committee of the National Grange will be in session in Washington at that time and its three members will be heard on the program--Fred J. Peckstone of Interlaken, N. Y.; Eugene A. Eckert of Mascoutah, Ill.; Ray W. Gill of Portland, Ore.

Music for the program of January 18th will be furnished by the United States Army Band, under the leadership of Captain Thomas F. Dares.

The chair factory is being sheathed up inside and double windows put on. This will make the building more comfortable for the workmen.

Forty or fifty years hence it may be of some interest to the people that time to know that on the 7th day of January the roads and fields were as devoid of snow as in July. It is now the 15th and wagons have been used all the time. No logging except yarding has been done, as the outlook for the lumbermen is about as bad as it can be. The "oldest inhabitant" hasn't a word to say; in fact, they freely admit they never saw anything like it.

Ice is being cut on the river and hauled to the village on wheels.

The local merchants have agreed to close their respective stores every evening in the week of eight o'clock, except Saturday.

QUOTATIONS FROM QUESTIONNAIRES

"Rather than mutilate the paper
I answer the questionnaire below.
Favorite features and most interested in

1. Bethel and vicinity news
2. Reports on road work
3. 40 Years Ago
4. Here and There in Maine
5. Church Social and other nearby
news
6. Advertising Classified in particular
7. Year editorials and comments

"Not interested in the 'Funnies'
or much of the magazine section,
but they most interest a great
many and are an improvement in the paper, which has lately been
filled by many obviously slicked
items. Certainly hope you can keep the Republican tone and battle the New Deal which threatens to engulf
us. We spend our summer vacations
in Bethel and anything relating to
our contacts in news of interest.
The Citizen brings us a breath of Maine every week. Enclosed is check for renewal."

The Citizen is rated as an "independent" newspaper, but the "Republican tone" is not denied. To us the last sentence gave the greatest pleasure.

"Favorite Features: Locals, the church news, poetry, The New Machine. Most interested in news
from Bethel, West Bethel, Grover Mill. Probably no one reads everything even in the Citizen. Some
leave out one thing, some another,
and variety of readers require variety in reading matter. Too many detective stories, not only too but most newspapers. They are the field of the A. P. Most of your short stories are passable, some of them
unusual—some of them good. You are printing a clean sheet, even to the old 'Keep it up'."

"These letters were of the type
that we wanted. More like these will be helpful for there is wide
latitude in good newspapers mattered. Following suggestions in the above and similar responses we are contemplating the more popular of our
features and ask the cooperation of
all interested as in the past."

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner
Falls, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems
Inseparable from Local Welfare.

On January 1, American business,
large and small, found itself with a
new item of operating expense to pay. The item is labeled "Social Security."

This year, unemployment insurance will take 1% of each employer's total pay-roll, and it is to be paid by the employer, not the employee. Next year the tax will be 2%, and in 1938 it will reach 3%,
the maximum under the present
law. Forecast is that the tax will produce total revenue of $250,000,- 000 during 1936. If business conditions remain unchanged, it will obviously produce $500,000,000 next
year, $750,000,000 per year thereafter. However, hope is that business betterment, with its corollary
of increased employment and higher wages, will steadily increase the revenue even though the percentage of tax remains constant.

Next step in the program will come in 1937, when the federal old-
age pension plan goes into operation. That will start with a 1% tax
on employers and 1% on employees,
which will mount slowly until it reaches 3% on each in 1949. Total federal tax will thus be 3% of all
payrolls by 1950, of which employers will pay 6%, employees 3%.

In addition to these federal levies,
states are studying ways and means
of bearing their share of the expense. In the case of old-age insurance, for example, the federal government will match state donations dollar for dollar. A number of states already have various taxes
for this purpose, others are planning them. In some cases, state funds are created by payments by
the employer alone, in others by
payments by both employer and employee. And there is a certain amount of variation in Oregon and
elsewhere, for a general sales tax
to create funds for the unfortunate.

State-federal cooperation involves certain legal difficulties. Requirement is that state funds shall
be turned over to the federal government for distribution. In most states, it seems that this would be unconstitutional under present
state constitutions. If that turns out to be true, states which wish to cooperate will have to go busily to work remaking their laws and
amending their constitutions.

Further legal troubles arise from the fact that, in the view of many attorneys, the social security act
was hastily written, lacks the clarity
it should have. Some think, as Business Week recently reported,
that present legislation should be thrown overboard and a new start
made. However, there seems small
chance that this will be done,
though it is expected the present

Congress will make an effort to clear up some of the more vague
parts of the law and thus make it legally sounder.

Dismissing these legal and technical difficulties, which must be eventually settled by the courts and Congress, it may be said that business views social security with mixed emotions. Many leading corporations have liberal pension
plans of their own, established long
before a federal law was conceived.
They agree with the principle the legislation represents, confused as they are by some of the details.
Many industries are considerably
eyebrowed as to where to get
the money, at a time when, in spite
of rising sales, net profits of numerous businesses are at comparatively
low levels. Hopes of the Administration is that business conditions
will continue to improve so rapidly
that profits cannot help but rise,
that increased costs will thus be automatically taken care of, for
under the law, these new costs become fixed overhead regardless of
any profit.

There, in brief, is the status of social security at present. It could be changed overnight by the passage of another kind of law, such as the Townsend plan with its demand for $200 a month for all people over 60. Most economists feel that if this happens, the whole
cause of social security will be endangered. The President also seems to reflect this view.

Comment on the President's speech to the Congress, on the state of the union, fell into partisan
channels except for that portion
dealing with foreign policy.

The President said that 85 or 90% of the world's people were peaceful, that 10 or 15% endangered
peace. He denounced dictators, and made bitter, thinly-veiled allusions
to saboteurs. He said the U. S.
must provide an adequate national defense and at the same time keep absolutely neutral and free from
dangerous foreign entanglements.
These views received general approval by U. S. commentators.

Body Dies by Organs

The human body dies, not quite
by inches, but at least by organs,
according to a heart specialist. The first organ to die after the heart
stops pumping blood around the body is the brain. This happens in
from eight to ten minutes, so that stoppage of the heart for about that long kills the brain and makes the
victim a complete or partial idiot,
even if the heart later starts up again. Next to die is the muscle
of the heart itself, which happens
in from ten to twenty minutes after the blood stops circulating. This marks the time within which victims of heart failure may be revived,
hearts which have stopped for more
than twenty minutes are likely
themselves to be dead and impossible to start.

Why We Need a National Umpire

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

As happened after the crash of the Blue Eagle, the recent decision invalidating A. A. A. has aroused various proposals for a change in our American form of government.

A typical suggestion is that we
withdraw from the Supreme Court
some or all of its authority to hold
elected officials to the course mapped
out for them in the Federal Constitution, and thereby extend to Congress the power to steer our ship of state among whatever shoals or
channels may strike its fancy.

There is nothing either new or impossible about such proposals.
They can be translated into reality
by the mere adoption of any one of several amendments now pending in Washington. Let the American people agree to relinquish to Congress
certain rights granted them by the Constitution and preserved by the Supreme Court—and the thing is accomplished.

That's what advocates of those
amendments are asking us to do.

But, simple as this idea can be made to sound, it remains a serious
and dangerous proposal. It strikes
at the very root of accepted American principles in government. Before we consider any such course
let's pause to remind ourselves of several facts of our past and current history. Let's recall, for example:

That alone, among the greater nations of earth, our country has retained its form of government unchanged during the past century.

That much of the permanence and success of its government has been attributed to the system of checks
and balances between executive,
judicial and legislative branches,
and between the states and Washington. It is based on the principle that the right of the people and
the states to govern themselves shall not be usurped by central authority.

That under our form of government America has enjoyed a larger
share of happiness and prosperity
than any other nation.

That none of the nations which in recent years have shifted to the newer forms now popular in Europe
have achieved anything that can be envied by the American people.

And finally:

That whatever passing benefits
various odd experiments may offer
a favored few, they do not hold the solution of our problems. Despite the alluring phrases of economic crooners, America still subscribes to
the essential truth and wisdom expressed by George Washington when he said:

"Nothing but harmony, honesty,
industry and frugality are necessary
to make us a great and happy
people."

The following industries established new production records in 1935, though some were not so fortunate in the matter of profits:
Radio, washing machines, refrigerators, electric power, nickel,
gasoline, shoes, aviation, rayon, oil
burners.

fresh air around you! For tests show that poorly adjusted motor discharge large quantities of unburned and partially burned gases. These mechanical defects allow the gas to seep into the automobile compartment, where the driver is quickly affected. The high percentage of such danger is shown by a Connecticut survey made last year when several thousand cars were stopped on the road and tested. Measurable quantities of carbon monoxide were found in half of them. In order that your life may not be one of the thousands snuffed out as the result of carbon monoxide, science has developed the Fox or Prover, a device to detect waste and unburned fuel found in the exhaust of a motor. Proper adjustments can then be made to eliminate this deadly danger.

Disfranchisement

It depends upon the state laws whether a person who has served a prison sentence becomes disfranchised. Many states disfranchise those convicted of felony; others do not. The right to vote may be returned to the person who has served a prison term by the order of the governor of the state. Federal prisoners are always disfranchised, but the right to vote may be returned to a discharged prisoner by the order of the Chief Executive of the United States (The President).

PUBLIC ATTITUDE HELPS THE BANKS

Annual Bankers Convention Says Public Confidence Has Been Restored

The restoration of public confidence in banking has put it in the position where it can function fully and vigorously in playing its full economic part in the progress of recovery, said the American Bankers Association in its annual convention. "The passage of a generally constructive banking law in the Banking Act of 1933 has stabilized the banking situation and enabled bankers to devote undivided attention to the normal administration of their institutions in promoting the business and public welfare of their communities," the resolutions said. "We feel that it is a particularly important feature of this law that it aims to create through the revision of the Federal Reserve Board a Supreme Court of Finance which, with the non-political appointment of exceptionally competent men, should constitute one of the greatest forward steps in building a sound banking and credit system."

The Government in Banking

Another resolution said: "We particularly emphasize the desirability of the retirement of government from those fields of extending credits of various types which can be adequately served by privately owned institutions. We recognize that the exigencies of the now passing depression made necessary a large participation by government for a time in the task of meeting emergency financial needs. "These conditions have been largely remedied and the obligation now rests upon the banks and other financial agencies to demonstrate to the people of this country that they are fully able and willing to meet all demands upon them for sound credit cooperation. It is our duty as bankers to facilitate in every effective way the retirement of government agencies from credit activities by promoting public understanding of the proper function of privately owned banking."

School Savings

During the school year which closed June 30, 1935, American school children to the number of 3,326,389 deposited $11,572,900 in school savings, report to the American Bankers Association show.

Here's a hint you will not want to miss. To dust sugar on hot doughnuts and to get it on evenly shake the doughnuts in a paper bag containing powdered or granulated sugar. There's no waste of sugar, there's no spilled sugar to be wiped up.

HOME-GROWN FOOD HELPS FAMILY MEET CASH NEEDS

Almost 60 percent of the food consumed by Maine farm families was produced on the farm during the last year, according to records kept in cooperation with the Extension Service of the Maine College of Agriculture. This is significant because it releases cash for other items in the family budget, says Edna M. Cobb, home management specialist. How this or any other additional cash income which may be available during 1936 will be used depends largely upon the extent to which various items have been cut during the years of lesser incomes.

"Some families may have a more liberal clothing allowance. In families where incomes have met sufficient clothing needs there will be replacements of household furnishings which have worn out or there may be some improvements made to the house. Still other families whose incomes have been able to take care of these things will provide for some necessary medical or dental attention which has been neglected. A more liberal allowance for school expenses may be planned for in some families."

"According to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the foods for which prices may be higher are, pork, lard, bread, flour, and cereals since the supplies of these are relatively short. There may be slight increases in clothing prices during 1936, especially in wool, silk, rayon, and shoes. The prices of items for household operations such as kerosene, coal, soap, and other cleaning supplies will probably remain about the same as a year ago."

"Prices for building materials have probably risen as low as they will for some time and there is no evidence of an immediate increase. No advance in the price of automobiles is anticipated."

When you buy cranberries look for a fresh plump berry that is firm and has a high luster. Avoid shriveled, dull or soft berries.

HOW CLUB WORK IS SUPERVISED IN RUMFORD

By Harry C. Brown

The arrival of the birds from the South tell us that the time is right to organize the 4-H Garden Clubs in Rumford.

Early in the winter months, dates are made with our State Club Leader and County Club Agent to meet in Rumford for the purpose of enrolling the boys and girls.

We go to the different schools and talk to all the children who are old enough to be club members. Our talks vary, but we try to create interest and at the same time, pass out a few helpful suggestions for those who are to belong. Before leaving each school, we leave enrollment cards with the teachers, who attend to the actual details of enrollment.

The cards are sent to the local leader, who takes off the information and then forwards them to the county club agent.

The teachers help in getting the officers of the club elected and hold a few meetings with those in their school for the purpose of explaining how to properly conduct a meeting according to Parliamentary practice and perhaps they will have a meeting especially for the purpose of teaching the boys and girls how to keep their records. This sometimes proves to be an ideal arithmetic lesson.

We have a garden plot of nearly two acres which we use for the town boys and girls who have no place for gardens at home. This land is plowed and harrowed for the club members. The boys of the Agricultural Department in the high school stake off the gardens into two square rods each. They are then numbered and when the danger of frosts are over the gardens are given out to all those who have signed up and desire a plot in this location.

A date is set when all the gardens are to be planted. If any fail to get their garden planted, we find out the reason why and many times have to give that garden to someone else. The club member may have changed his mind about having a garden or he is going to move away from town.

After school closes in June the club members meet with their local leader throughout the summer months. Sometimes we hold our meetings down to the gardens, for the purpose of showing how a garden well-cared for should look and also to point out how poorly cared for gardens appear. Other things like insect control and diseases are pointed out and discussed. Thinning is also another important factor.

We encourage the help and interest of the parents.

The gardens are graded several times during the summer. A perfect garden is given a grade of A, while a poor garden would be given D. Some gardens are graded E which means very poorly planted, weedy, and not looked after by the club member. I find the boys and girls are eager to know their grade at each meeting because they feel if they have a grade of A during the summer, that they stand a better chance for a prize in the fall at exhibition.

We always have one day set aside for an outing. In recent years we have been going to the county 4-H field day. This day is looked forward to with much anticipation.

Sometime during the summer a news letter is prepared for the teachers, telling about the details of the local contests. This letter goes to the exhibition to be held, when the records and stories are to be passed in, rehearsals for the entertainment when to have the club members bring in the exhibits. This news letter is given to the principals the first week of school to the fall. It appears to do much to help the contest go off without a hitch.

The exhibition is prepared and opened up for the public free of charge at 3 P. M. on Exhibition Day. At three o'clock we let all the club members out of school and come to the hall where they look at the exhibits and then we seat them and give them free ice cream. The kids for the evening show 4 H plan if they have finished on satisfactory and then we sing 4 H songs and give out any necessary notices about the evening's entertainment. Finally the State Club Leader and the County Club Agent speak to the members also. The meetings last for about one and a half hours.

The evening's entertainment is the big event of our contest. Each school having club members in it contributes to the program. There are usually eight or nine schools taking part. The teachers are at liberty to use anyone in their school for this entertainment. It is the usual practice to have over a hundred boys and girls taking part in the program. The price of admission is 25c. The money collected is used to pay bills and for prizes. We usually have a packed hall; of course, all those helping go free. This entertainment adds much to our final success in 4-H work. It gets the parents out to see the results of the season's work; the gate receipts furnish us with money for prizes and expenses.

The success of 4-H work in Rumford is due to the fact that the co-operation of the Superintendent of Schools, the principals, the teachers and the parents, and the state and county leaders is a hundred per cent perfect. One person alone couldn't possibly do 4-H work on so large a scale but when a large group is all interested and willing to work, a good organization is the result.

300 MEN MEMBERS IN OXFORD FARM BUREAU

Roger Knight, Rumford, who will represent Oxford County at the state farmer's woodchopping contest, joined the Farm Bureau this week to bring the total men's membership to three hundred. This mark is 25 over the goal set for this year, and highest since 1925. Two new organizations, Canton and Woodstock, have helped raise the total as well as increases in several communities. Men's groups that have increased their membership over 1935 are: Bethel, Buckfield, East Bethel, Mexico, North Paris, North Rumford, Norway, South Hill, South Paris, South Paris, with 51 men members, leads the county and North Rumford is next with 38.

Nutritionists have solved one of the mysteries of Old Mexico. The people had no vitamin A, they thought, until it was discovered in this much loved chili powder. Chili peppers contain two or three times as much vitamin A as a good grade of butter. Most other peppers are also good sources of vitamin A.

TAX LIEN ON REAL ESTATE

As many people have no understanding of the law in regard to tax lien method of collection, we publish below the law passed by the 1933 Legislature, as amended in 1935. Chapter 28, Public Laws of 1935:

AN ACT to Provide for Alternative enforcement of Tax Liens.

Sec. 1. Alternative method for the enforcement of liens for taxes on real estate. Liens on real estate created by section 3 of chapter 13 of the revised statutes, in addition to other methods previously established by law may be enforced in the following manner, provided, however, that in the inventory and valuation upon which the assessment is made there shall be a description of the real estate sufficiently accurate to identify it: Any officer to whom a tax has been committed for collection may, after the expiration of 8 months and within 1 year after the date of commitment to him of said tax, in the case of a person resident in the town where the tax is assessed, give to the person against whom said tax is assessed, or leave at his last and usual place of abode, a notice in writing signed by said officer stating the amount of such tax, describing the real estate on which the tax is assessed, alleging that a lien is claimed on said real estate to secure the payment of the tax and demanding the payment of said tax within 10 days after service of such notice. After the expiration of said 10 days and within 10 days thereafter in the case of a resident and in all other cases within a year from the date of the commitment of said tax to said officer, said officer shall record in the registry of deeds of the county or registry district where such real estate is situated, a certificate signed by said officer setting forth the amount of such tax, a description of the real estate on which the tax is assessed and an allegation that a lien is claimed on said real estate to secure the payment of said tax. That a demand for payment of said tax has been made in accordance with the provisions of this act and that said tax remains unpaid. In all cases, except in the case of a resident, said certificate so filed need not contain the allegation that payment of said tax has been demanded. At the time of the recording of the certificate in the registry of deeds as herein provided, in all cases such officer shall file with the town treasurer a true copy of said certificate and also at the time of recording as aforesaid, the said officer shall mail by registered letter to each record holder of a mortgage on said real estate, addressed to him at his place of last and usual abode, a true copy of said certificate. The fee to be charged to the taxpayer for said notice and filing shall not exceed $1 and the fee to be charged by the register of deeds for such filing shall not exceed 50 cents.

Sec. 2. Filing of certificate to create mortgage. The filing of the certificate, provided for in section 1, in the registry of deeds as aforesaid shall be deemed to create and shall create a mortgage on said real estate to the town in which the real estate is situated having priority over all other mortgages, liens, attachments and encumbrances of any nature, and shall give to said town all the rights usually incident to a mortgage, except that the mortgagee shall not have any right of possession of said real estate until the right of redemption herein provided for shall have expired.

Sec. 3. Foreclosure provisions. If said mortgage, together with interest and costs, shall not be paid within 18 months after the date of the filing of said certificate in the registry of deeds as herein provided the said mortgage shall be deemed to have been foreclosed and the right of redemption to have expired.

Sec. 4. Notice. The filing of said certificate in said registry of deeds shall be sufficient notice of the existence of the mortgage therein recorded for all purposes.

Sec. 5. Discharge. In the event said tax, interest and costs shall be paid within the period of 18 months herein provided for the mortgagee shall be discharged and the mortgage shall be deemed to have been foreclosed and the right of redemption to have expired.

"Extra Girl"

When Texas Centennial Exposition officials began to select the Rangerettes hostesses for the Exposition, they planned to have one who was born in each of the 48 states. Then along came Mabel Rooks, shown above, and she passed the strict requirements. Officials found later she had been born in the District of Columbia, so they increased the corps to 50, giving themselves a little leeway in the matter of states.

Food Calories

A food calorie is equivalent to the amount of heat which would raise the temperature of about four pounds of water one degree Fahrenheit. An average-sized, healthy man, sitting comfortably in a chair, will spend about 100 calories of energy per hour. This amount of energy, says an authority, is obtainable from the oxidation of about an ounce of starch, or a little less than half an ounce of fat.

Born

In West Bethel, Jan. 1, to the wife Kenneth McInnis, a son, Donald Libby.

Died

In Auburn, Jan. 13, Jesse Stiles, a native of Bethel, aged 45 years.

"Life" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 19.

The Golden Text is: "record, that God hath eternal Life, and this Life Son" (I John 5:11).

Among the citations of the Bible is the following: "the first day of the week, in the morning, they came to the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and found the stone rolled away, and entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus. And as they were much thereabout, behold two men by them in shining garments as they were afraid, and down their faces to the ground, said unto them, Why are ye living among the dead? here, but is risen (Luke 24:5, 6 to colon):

The Lesson-Sermon also the following passage: "Christian Science text: 'Science and Health with Key Scriptures' by Mary Baker Eddy. 'Jesus could have withstood his enemies. He would have laid down a human life for his spiritual likeness of the divine, and loved men to destruction of the mortal body that he might furnish immortal life. Nothing could Life of man' (page 518).

Prosperity Is Returning to Puerto Rico

Deficit Wiped Out; PRRA Begins to Rescue Farms

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

ENCOURAGING in this age of off-appearing government deficits is the report of Gov. Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico, on the island territory's activities for the fiscal year 1934-35.

For Puerto Rico, tiny West Indian paradise where some 1,700,000 or more American citizens live under a Stars and Stripes which ripples in the balmy trade winds, closed the fiscal year with a surplus of $600,000, as against a deficit of $70,000 for the preceding fiscal year.

Political strife and the cry for independence, which for some time had been gathering momentum and eventually resulted in the resignation of Gov. Robert H. Gore, who had served since July, 1933, have abated under the two years of the Winship administration until today Puerto Ricans have allowed the greater share of their political ardor to crystallize into a calm, determined, orderly fight for statehood.

Hearings on the case for Puerto Rican statehood will be resumed during the next congress. The congressional committee on territories began public hearings in Washington last June on a bill which would allow the island legislature at San Juan to frame a constitution and become the forty-ninth state. This is the desire of the coalition party now in power in the island government, which is completely autonomous except for the appointment of a governor by the President of the United States. There is still some agitation in the islands, fostered by the liberal party, for complete independence, and there has also been talk of a compromise of the two parties which would seek for Puerto Rico complete autonomy without territorial independence. This latter arrangement would make the island unique politically, would place it somewhere between a territory and a state, and is believed by many authoritative observers to be the likely outcome.

Revenue Collections Are Up.

Despite the lingering depression which has not shown signs of lifting so quickly in Puerto Rico as in other parts of the United States, revenue collections for the fiscal year just closed were more than $2,612,000, an increase of $1,371,000 over the 1933-34 collections, and $41,000 more than Manuel V. Escamenech, the treasurer, had expected. Municipal finances did not do so well, and none of the cities, of which there are many on this highly populated island, built up a surplus.

The chief cause for worry lay in the balance of trade in eight years. Puerto Rico sends 91 per cent of its exports to the United States, and imports far more foodstuffs than in many years preceded.

Especially worthy of note was the drop off in the export coffee business, despite concerted promotional drives to popularize Puerto Rican coffee in the United States. Where in 1934 the island exported 2,070,000 pounds of coffee, it shipped away only 800,000 pounds in 1935. Imports of coffee for the fiscal year just closed were 1,122,000 pounds, compared with only 16,439 pounds the year before. Governor Winship attributes this startling reversal of form to the small size of the 1934 crop.

There was, however, a general feeling of improvement in the governor's report. Not a little of the credit for improvement is given to the Puerto Rican Relief administration, the efforts of which are just beginning to be felt, since its work has not yet reached the height of tion, although they constitute only .7 per cent of the total holdings. So serious has this situation become for the small farmers, hundreds of families from modest farms have been forced to give up and move into the cities, there to take up their dwelling in the most inadequate and unsanitary of hovels, constituting a threat to political peace, an addition to the already difficult unemployment problem and a potential source of diseases which spring from poverty and uncleanness.

President Roosevelt, visiting the island in 1934, was impressed by the evil of this unlawful concentration and declared that he would revive both the spirit and the letter of the law of 1900, and found from relief agencies). This calls for $2,200,000.

Coffee and tobacco industries in the hills which dot the island everywhere, as well as sugar plantations on the coastal plains and the more infrequent island lowlands, have suffered from centuries of soil erosion, with resultant impairment of efficiency. Reforestation, forestation, and preventive measures against soil erosion will be started to the tune of $594,000. Most of the topsoil has been washed away from large areas, and many of the trees which were not cut were destroyed by hurricanes—those of 1928 and 1932, which took 200 lives each, as well as the more recent ones which wreaked such havoc along the Floridan shores.

ish the cattle tick and the coconut budrot. This will get $307,000.

Three projects combined aim at the readjustment of Puerto Rico's principal industry, sugar. The Jones-Costigan act required a cut of 150,000 tons in the island's production of sugar. This made the unemployment problem even worse than it should have been. It obviated the necessity of finding some other use for 75,000 acres of marginal sugar land. The PRRA intends to turn this land into home-steading and crop diversification projects. Hammers will soon ring in the construction of homes, schools and community buildings. The farmers now in the city will be moved out onto these lands and given opportunity to become owners of the little farms upon which they settle. The project will cost nearly $6,000,000.

Supplementing this project are two others, that of rural resettlement on marginal sugar lands ($1,808,000), and that of resettlement on good sugar lands ($6,500,000). The projects have as one of their goals the cooperative ownership of processing plants and systems of marketing. Eventually it is hoped by this means to diminish the amount of productive and profitable land held by corporations in far-removed localities and build up the security of the independent farmer.

Nor is the ailing coffee-growing industry to be left out in the cold. In fact, coffee, along with tobacco and citrus fruit farms, will receive a larger allotment of funds than any other of the projects, a total of almost $4,000,000. Hurricanes and falling prices have put these farmers into a sorry state. This part of the rehabilitation scheme is intended to acquire and redistribute thousands of small parcels of land, which are now struggling under an unwieldy burden of debt, at one-half the appraised value.

Will Buy Processing Plants.

Under still another project, the PRRA will seek to buy equipment for the processing and preservation of farm and community products. Such equipment would include sugar centrals, coffee mills, warehouses and cold storage plants. The estimated cost of the venture is $4,000,000.

Amid all this bread and butter talk, culture will not be overlooked by the beneficent PRRA. Its program calls for a grant of approximately $1,200,000 to the University of Puerto Rico, a first rate co-educational institution founded more than thirty years ago in Rio Piedras. Originally intended as a normal school, this seat of learning now embraces colleges of liberal arts, law, agriculture and the mechanic arts, pharmacy and the university high school. It is known for its fine work in tropical medicine, tropical agriculture and Spanish and English languages. Graduated from its classes are many of the leaders of island life and, in fact, many prominent persons throughout Spanish America.

The PRRA administration wishes to attain a permanent status, but so far has not been able to secure the necessary approval from Washington. Ordinarily the PRRA funds are endorsed only up to June, 1937, but during the last session of congress a bill was introduced by which the funds of PRRA might be extended three years past that date. It didn't pass.

San Juan (shown above), and the tropical paradise of which it is the capital, are looking up to better times, it is revealed in the report of the governor, Blanton Winship, shown in inset at the right. The islanders were demonstrative in their approval of the New Deal, as pictured at lower right, and have welcomed the PRRA, administered by Ernest Gruening (inset, left).

Small Farmer Suffers.

With a population which has doubled since the island was ceded to the United States at the close of the Spanish-American war in 1898, Puerto Rico is now the most thickly settled agricultural region under Uncle Sam's rule. Yet, holdings of agricultural land are concentrated to an extent that has proved itself harmful to the industry as a whole and has reduced the small owner to a state approaching economic slavery.

Although congress, as far back as 1900, foresaw the hovering evil of concentration of ownership and passed a law which limited corporate holdings to 500 acres, the law was never enforced. Millions in American capital rolled in, to become the foundation for large-scale farming, chiefly on sugar plantations, until today holdings of more than 500 acres include a third of the area under cultivation.

upon it the return of Puerto Rico to a sound agricultural economy.

Funds Fall Short.

Under the direction of Ernest Gruening, head of the division of territories and island possessions of the United States Department of the Interior, the PRRA was to complete operations the cost of which has been estimated at $157,000,000. Doctor Gruening has been faced with the rather discouraging fact that his organization has been given only $61,000,000 so far, his projects having had to take reduction after reduction in finances.

In the face of these rather fundamental annoyances, the program cut out for Doctor Gruening and the PRRA is nothing if not an ambitious one. One of the first things to be done is clearing the slums of the cities and solving the housing problems of the farm families who have been forced to seek the centers of population to make sure of getting something to eat (usually Another aid to the farmer will be the rural electrification project, a tiny counterpart of similar projects so dear to the heart of the administration on the mainland. This, to cost $2,728,000 will provide hydro-electric power to irrigate land, especially that on the wide southern coastal plain where the rainfall is far below the average of 76 inches annually, and to electrify industries and homes in the interior. Private power companies, including two owned by foreign concerns, now furnish power in some of the cities and their surrounding areas, but the government claims to have no intention of competing with these in any way. There are also several localities in which power is now supplied by plants owned and operated by the insular government.

The girl quivered, tensed, and bounded sideways. The belt-ax was lying near the knife. She clutched one in each hand and straightened erect, her eyes ablaze.

"You beast!" she cried. "Go! Go, or I'll kill you!"

He smiled with cool irony. "Why so theatrical? Hysterics are not in your line, my dear Lillith."

That lowered her voice, but not the knife and ax. She began to edge towards him, with the blades raised ready to strike. Her voice came from her stiffened lips, low and hoarse and deathly calm:

"If you do not go, I will kill you, unless you first kill me."

"You are stark crazy. I'm going. It may be two or three weeks before I can come back. That should be long enough for you to starve into sanity. You'll be glad to welcome me then. Only, how about your father? Does it not sober you to realize it will be your fault if he dies?"

For answer, she took a full step nearer. The look in her eyes daunted him. He slanted sideways, caught up Garth's rifle, and ran across to the bank above the canoe. When, more slowly, she came to the top of the bank, he had the canoe launched and was heaving in the wolfskin knapsack.

He jumped aboard with the rifle and one paddle. As he backed off shore, she ran down to the water's edge and flung his engagement ring at his face. It struck his upturned forehead and glanced outboard and its flash was instantly quenched in the water.

CHAPTER VIII

Woodcraft.

OUT of the pit of blackness, Garth's first dimly conscious thoughts were of water. He was still in swimming. . . . No, the water was only on his face. Not rain, nor poured water—something wet sopping his forehead.

He opened his eyes, blinked the haze from them, and found himself sinking up into a pair of sunken blue eyes. They were clouded and dark with misery. Yet with strange suddenness they brightened. At that he realized they were the eyes of Lillith Ramill.

"What's—happened?" he muttered. Even as his lips moved, he remembered. "Huxby—his pistol. Must have—shot me."

"Yes. Dad also."

Garth sought to tense his flaccid muscles, ready to bound up. She laid a restraining hand on his forehead. "Lie still. He went—"

"What?"

"Right after it. Be quiet, else you may go unconscious again. The bullet cut across the back of your head. All these two days you've been there in that frightful stupor. I could not wake you up. I felt sure you'd die."

"Stupor—two days?" he muttered. "Concussion—brain."

He made deliberate trial, and found he could move his legs and arms. "Luck—no paralysis. Soon be all right. But—your father? You said 'father also.' Can't see why. Wolf was rabid only for my claim—not blood mad."

"Of course! The cowardly beast meant only to murder you. But when he fired again, Dad jumped up between."

"Dad?"

"Not if there was a doctor. It's through the shoulder. The coward—ran off with the canoe. Instead of shooting himself like a man!"

"Run off, did he? Thought he'd killed your father?"

"No, he said it wasn't serious. All we needed was to take Dad in the canoe and get that man Tobin's medical kit."

"Yet he ran off without you?"

"I made him go. I drove him off, the beastly sneaking coward!"

Garth stared, perplexed. "You did that? Yet he wanted to take your father where he could receive treatment."

She frowned. "He thought you dead. But after I nearly fainted, I pushed against you to get up. I felt you were still alive. I was afraid you'd come to—would move. He would have—finished you. So I—drove him off."

"Leaving yourself and your father marooned here."

The girl stiffened. Her mouth went hard. "Don't fancy I did it for you! It was—it was because I was not going to let him finish his sneak murder. It would have been the same if I'd gone off and let you die. You can see that. You must!"

He smiled up at her frown. "All the more sporting of you. Not half bad, I'd say."

"Oh, but it is bad—frightfully bad! No food—not a thing to give Dad all this time."

A sudden thought jerked Garth up to a sitting position. He swayed from dizziness. Then his head cleared. He was only rather weak from blood-loss and sore about the back of his head. An exploring hand found a wad of moss, tied upon his wound with a band of plaited grass. He heard the girl murmur:

"I fixed Dad's the same way—ashes and the moss to hold it on. Ashes or soot—I once heard about something like that for cuts."

He pointed to the scattered ashes of the dead fires. "Be quick. Build a big blaze and throw on green wood. That southbound plane! Must signal it. Even if he's aboard, he can't keep the pilot from coming down."

Lillith Ramill's head drooped despondently. "I saw it this morning—way out across the sky. First there was the drone of the motor. Then I saw it—way off. Only, I could do nothing. Yesterday I used your last match. I wanted to boil for Dad the one pinch of tea that's left. A puff of wind blew out the flame. Now there's no hope. He took your rifle too. No fire or food or gun, or any chance of rescue!"

Garth looked around and saw her father tossing in feverish sleep under the shade of a slight brush canopy. He gave the overwrought girl a bantering smile.

"What, merely a matter of fire, medicine, food, and escape? If only you were a Boy Scout! How about becoming a Campfire Girl? Fetch me a two-foot willow branch the size of your forefinger, a thong, one straight dry stick, and that chunk of dead birch trunk."

A little sand increased the friction of the fire-drill point at the bottom of the shallow hole he made in the block of wood. The dry birch soon began to smoke.

"Now, we're under way," he said. "Next comes medicine. By using the ashes, you gave our wounds sterile dressings. Your father was tuned up to the pink of condition. His wound will heal as rapidly as mine. What little fever he has means nothing. To cool it, crush in his drinking water some of the cranberries from over there along the edge of the muskeg. You might boil willow bark and add a little of the bitter decoction to the cranberry juice."

"Oh, it's good to know he's not sick. But to starve to death!"

Garth pointed to the wild fowl out in the swamp. They were beginning to flock together with the approach of autumn. "How would you like canvasback or mallard for dinner?"

Her eyes brightened, only to cloud again. "You have no gun."

After looping some thongs to his belt, he went to stack a hollow pile of brush on a forked stub that had broken off from a fallen beech tree. Out in the water, he bobbed under and came up with his head between the forks of the float.

He waded, neck deep, up the muskeg stream so slowly that the stub and branches appeared to be an ordinary bunch of driftwood.

When he stepped off over his depth, he began to tread water. By a quiet movement of his hands under the surface, he glided the blind into the midst of a mallard flock. The trick was to grasp a duck's feet and jerk the bird under before it could squawk. He waded back to shore with five dead mallards tied to his belt.

After the meal on roast duck, he set some rabbit snares. He then showed Lillith how to make cords by splitting off strands from peeled spruce roots.

Next came the carving of Eskimo hooks from duck bones. With bait, a catgut leader and a spruce-root proved. "Sounds good. It means you'll soon be in shape for rafting. As for your question, perhaps you imagine Miss Ramill and I have been heaving that down timber over the bank just for sport."

The millionaire staggered to his feet unaided for the first time since Huxby had shot him down. "A raft! How the devil can you make one if you can't make a canoe? No rope or rawhide thongs to tie the logs together."

Garth supported him over through the spruce thicket to the drop-off of the bank. The wobbly invalid squatted on the brink and stared in surprise. Down the beach, close beside the water, his daughter sat plaiting a great pile of willow withes into a thick line. Before her floated a partly built raft of dead birch tree trunks.

Mr. Ramill's gaze passed over the raft, to peer out across the immense lake-like expanse of the great river. "Raft! Ugh! It's worse out there than the white water when we shot those rapids."

"There'll be plenty of free bathing for us, but no danger of drowning," Garth replied. "Only trouble, this wind would blow us upstream. We'll have to wait for a shift. The only other chance is that one of the boats may be coming out."

"Boats?"

"The supply steamers of the Hudson's Bay company and other traders, taking out the season's cargoes of furs."

The millionaire grunted his relief: "Ugh—steamers! Almost good as a plane."

"If one comes along, and if we see it in time," Garth qualified. "You are rather far-sighted. You might watch for smoke downriver."

"I'll do that. D—n your dithering with any raft! Ten to one, you've already left every steamer slip past. All this time with your nose rubbing those d—d logs!"

Garth went down to tell Lillith that her father was by way of being a beautiful a fresh-water fish.

The newly caught fish proved far better eating than even the best of trout. Mr. Ramill's slight fever gave him a distaste for duck meat and the rabbits that were snared. But he ate his full share and more of the delicious fish.

Besides the cranberries, Lillith gathered black currants and blueberries and mushrooms. More fish were caught than could be eaten fresh. A number were soon on the smoke rack.

A cold sleety rainstorm drenched the camp. It brought only temporary discomfort, for Garth kept the fire alive under a slanted heap of spruce boughs. None the less, the storm spurred him to redoubled activity. He knew it to be the forerunner of the autumn blizzards that might now howl down off the snow-clad Selwyns at any time.

While Mr. Ramill's slight fever remained, he said little and seemed to take everything as a matter of course. He had fully recovered from the effects of shock even before the fifth day when the bullet wound through his upper chest began to heal. But with the passing of his feverish condition the irritability of convalescence jabbed him out of his placid contentment.

"Why are you loafing around here, Garth?" he rasped. "Instead of wasting all this time piling up food, you could have made a canoe and run us down across to that refueling post days ago."

Garth swept his right hand edge-wise out across his uplifted empty left palm. "No gun—no hides. Dead birch—no bark. No hides, no bark—no canoe."

"Huh! Do you mean to say we'll have to stick here and freeze in your d—d Arctic winter?"

"Growl away, sir," Garth answered.

"Growl away, sir," Garth answered.

You're certain—certain that it's really—

"A steamer," he replied. "But what if—if they don't—see us? It's night."

"Darker the better, if no fog. They can't miss seeing this fire."

Garth turned to eye her in the glare of the upflaring fire. He looked at her worn moccasins and lynxskin leggings, at the crude skirt of moose-calf skin and the tattered upper part of the sports dress. He looked at the girl's dope-smearred face and at the tight pigtail of the semi-bobbed hair that had once been so frozen in that modish permanent wave. His gray eyes twinkled in the firelight.

"Well, I'd say you're less a sight than when I first met you."

Her eyes did not twinkle. They flashed. "You'll not have much longer to insult me!"

"I may if you don't fetch the blanket," he said. "A fire on the shore means nothing of itself. Just an Indian camp—John Buck and his squaw. We'll have to signal."

The word sent her bounding up the bank. She came flying back with the blanket. Garth ordered her to hold one corner. He took another. They stood in front of the fire, with the big blanket stretched between them. Mr. Ramill called irritably from the top of the bank. What did they mean, awakening him and taking away his bedding? Lillith cried out the glad news. Garth gave her a curt order to pay attention. At his commands, she began to stoop and rise in unison with him, lowering the blanket to the sand and jerking it up again in front of the fire, at irregular intervals.

After some time he ordered a halt, with the blanket on the ground. He added an explanation: "Those were dots and dashes. We've given the SOS—and my name. They may not have made it out. That light is nearer, but it has not turned. Ready now. We'll repeat."

Above the low-hung star another star flashed on and off. Across the silent, glimmering flood of the river came the hoarse blasts of a steamer's whistle, muffled by distance yet unmistakable.

"All right, Miss Ramill," Garth said. "Tell your maid to pack your luggage."

She asked in a low voice: "Haven't I tried to play up? Is it sporting of you to mock me?"

Her face was shadowed. He could not see the look that went with the questions. After a moment, he answered soberly. "It is not, and you have. Permit me to apologize."

"Is that all?"

"What else?" he replied. "You are of course relieved and pleased to be rid of a man you so thoroughly hate. You may rest assured I will not intrude, once you're aboard ship."

"Yes," she murmured, "when Dad and I no longer have any need of you to—"

Her father came staggering down the bank to thrust in between them. "I say, Garth!—don't lie. Is it true the steamer is putting in for us?"

Doubtful of a safe night landing at this unused beach, the steamer captain lay off shore and sent in a canoe. Garth steered Mr. Ramill into the birchbark. At the same time Lillith stepped in ahead of her father. She repeated the maneuver when the two Indian paddlers drove the canoe out alongside the little river steamer.

Garth saw no more of the girl until after the steamer tied up at Fort Simpson, the trading post at the mouth of the Liard river. Taken into a stateroom by the wife of a missionary from Fort Norman, she remained in complete seclusion.

Her father kept almost equally close in the skipper's own room. The canoe sent had welcomed the American millionaire to his bunk—for a consideration. The cabin was jammed with fur traders and Fort Norman oil field officials, who were going outside for the winter. Garth messed and berthed forward with the crew.

QUAINT FREIBURG

Clear Water Runs Through This Freiburg Street.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

FREIBURG, gateway to the Black Forest of Germany, not only thrills tourists with its quaintness, but is a city of historical monuments. Many of the monuments are churches, but numerous lay monuments also flank Freiburg's streets.

Martin Waldseemüller, the geographer who was the first to put the name "America" on a map, was a Freiburg, and his ancestral dwelling not only still stands but flourishes. Martin's father was a prosperous butcher, who apparently held views unpopular in Germany even then, for he was known as "King of the Jews" and met a violent death.

The family were at the time living in what is now No. 9 Lowenstrasse, then the Pike's Head house, and Martin was a student at the newly established Albert-Ludwig university. Later, when Waldseemüller's "Cosmographic Introduction" and the world map, on which for the first time the newly discovered Western World was called "America," became famous, neighbors probably remembered that a family of that name had lived on their street. But it was only in recent years that a tablet was placed over the door of the little two-story yellow house, stating that here from 1490 to 1492 lived Martin Waldseemüller, who in the famous World Atlas of 1507 bestowed on the continent of America the name it bears.

It is a lovely spot now, with a shabby black door, sign of the hair dresser, and a sign over the door. No one looking at its positively "primitive" front could dream that it had witnessed the scenes of 450 years.

The Waldseemüller family, whose name is known to probably the most spectators of all Freiburg's monuments, it was built by Emperor Maximilian I, but only three years after the completion of the city walls. There for a brief time, when Maximilian's grandson was born, it was never occupied. But the place has been continuously kept up, and now it is the town's largest savings bank, its walls of warm red and yellow, and a classical entrance of the baroque of a previous century.

Oldest Inn in Germany.

The inn was so generally considered to be the oldest inn in Germany that it is a deep yellow, three-story stone building with a high, dormer-windowed roof and maroon shutters, set slightly edge-wise and bulging a little with the bend of the street; but natty with a rather snapping its fingers to the 450-odd years that are chalked up against it.

The inn appears on Freiburg's town records as a going concern in 1390, and since that date the names of its proprietors are all on file. This is something of a miracle when you consider that the poor old Bear has kept his ground with his back against the city wall and his nose uncomfortably near the city's most vulnerable gate, and that he has survived the onslaught of Austrian, French and Swedish armies.

Buildings Kept Up.

All Freiburg's old buildings carry their age well, though, and are singularly lacking in a depressing museum atmosphere. They are kept up and painted, and, above all, lived in. About them hangs a jaunty air of character and usefulness such as you see in sturdy old people who refuse to be shelved. The Kaufhaus (Merchants' Hall) in the Münsterplatz, an amazing example of Late Gothic in bright red and gold, since it was begun, in 1524, has been a trading center for the Schwarzwald farmers.

The flat-faced yellow Kornhaus, or Granary, across the square, with its enormous steep gables and its red trimmings, was completed the year after John Cabot visited North America.

With the spread of Christianity, monasteries sprang up all over the Schwarzwald. Now, although the Rhine valley plain is known as the "Garden of Germany," the Schwarzwald is in an entirely different category. Bordered by streams the slopes are steep, timber-covered, and not conducive to agriculture.

The flatter uplands, as in our own New England states, were once heavily covered and are consequently stony and not highly productive. That the land was not capable of supporting a large population was early recognized by a law prohibiting the splitting up of farms among the descendants of their owners. In those days the land used to and still does go down to a single owner, leaving the rest of the family to shift for themselves.

Soon the surplus population, seeking a market for foodstuffs as well as for labor, settled about the monasteries in swarms, and the monks found themselves saddled with an unemployment problem, which they solved so successfully that in time Schwarzwald industries became famous.

The occurrence of timber and abundant clean sand started the glass industry. During the Age of Discovery the manufacture of glass for barter with the American Indians fanned this industry to fever heat.

The exploitation of silver-lead veins opened up a mining district which was once important and which was worked until a few years ago.

Water power led to gem-cutting. The house occupied by the Guild of Gem Cutters still stands, and when Marie Antoinette passed through Freiburg on her way to France to marry the Dauphin, the burghers presented her with a thousand cut garnets. Today in nearby Waldkirch is a large gem-cutting establishment. This same water power has been used for nearly 200 years to run Freiburg's silk-thread mills.

Forests made lumbering, clock-making (Schwarzwald clocks have wooden wheels), and woodcarving possible. Even in the Middle Ages Schwarzwald timber-drivers delivered their log rafts as far away as Rotterdam.

Sheep led to hat-making and weaving, willows to basket-making; and the Schwarzwald peddler, carrying hats and cloth, baskets and clocks, glassware and silver ornaments, was known at every door in Europe.

Even now handwork goes quietly along on a small scale in the forest, as if there had been no industrial revolution. In their own houses, men and women make clocks and music boxes and furniture, as well as funny little wooden toys that delight the heart of the most blasé and hardened child.

Vineyards in the City.

They weave, too, and stamp the cloth with wooden-block patterns, some of which have been in the same families for generations. One sees pieces of linen blocked with alarmingly realistic scenes from the Resurrection, and tablecloths, used only at Christmas, on which the whole lovely Christmas tale—Infant, Shepherds, Wise Men, camels and everything—is all hand-blocked.

The monks also planted the first-known vineyards of the district. As far back as the Eighth century there are vague accounts of grape-growing and wine-making in Breisgau, but the earliest official record of such activities comes from the Holy Ghost hospital in the middle of the Thirteenth century.

The most distinctive note of the Freiburg wine industry is that some

BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE HUNTER IS DISAPPOINTED

HOW he knew he was safe, Lightfoot the Deer couldn't have told you. He just knew it, that was all. He couldn't understand a word said by the man in whose yard he found himself when he climbed the bank after his long swim across the Big River. But he didn't have to understand words to know that he had found a friend. So he allowed the man to gently drive him over to an open shed where there was a pile of soft

The Hunter Looked Surprised and Then His Surprise Gave Way to Anger.

hay, and there he lay down, so tired that it seemed to him he couldn't move another step.

It was only a few minutes later that the hunter who had followed Lightfoot across the river reached the bank and scrambled out of the boat. Lightfoot's friend was waiting just at the top of the bank. Of course the hunter saw him at once.

"Hello, friend!" cried the hunter. "Did you see a deer pass this way a few minutes ago. He swam across the river, and if I know anything about it he's too tired to travel far now. I've been hunting of the vineyards are actually a part of the city. In Colombi park, almost the center of town, the sunny slopes are thickly planted with vines that yield a particularly delicious wine, and the Schlossberg vineyards roll down to the Schwarzbentor.

Most of the best wines of the district are white, or rather a delicate, fragile gold. And this fine wine has the signal virtue of being amazingly cheap.

So that's that for Freiburg's romantic past, which overlaps its present so neatly that the seam hardly shows. It also carries us on to her claim to glory.

This claim is upon one's standard of joy. If you are a student, you will find all that the heart could desire in the way of gaiety, typical college gaiety that doesn't seem to vary a hair's breadth the world over. But if you are seeking sophisticated night life, Freiburg will leave you cold; for it is essentially a university town and a place of retirement for people of considerable wealth and position.

The streets, down to the smallest, are immaculately clean, and during the warm weather flowers are everywhere—in the City Gardens, in the park along the Dreisam, in the open squares, and in rioting masses at all the windows, up to the tiny dormers high on the roofs.

The surroundings of the city, too, are charming. Right to its stately medieval gates sweeps the Schwarzwald, mile upon mile of pine, spruce, and fir, practically all owned by the Reich, but beautified and made accessible by the Black Forest association.

that fellow several days, and if I have any luck at all I ought to get him this time."

"I'm afraid you won't have any luck at all," said Lightfoot's friend. "You see, I don't allow any hunting on my land."

The hunter looked surprised, and then his surprise gave way to anger. "You mean," said he, "that you intend to get that deer yourself."

Lightfoot's friend shook his head.

"No," said he, "I don't mean anything of the kind. I mean that that deer is not to be killed if I can prevent it, and while he is on my land, I think I can. The best thing for you to do, my friend, is to get into your boat and row back where you came from. Are those your hounds barking over there?"

"No," replied the hunter promptly. "I know the law just as well as you do, and it is against the law to hunt deer with dogs. I don't even know who owns those two hounds over there."

"That may be true," replied Lightfoot's friend. "I don't doubt it is true. But you are willing to take advantage of the fact that some one else's dogs have broken the law. You know that those dogs had driven that deer into the Big River, and you promptly took advantage of the fact to try to reach that deer before he could get across. You are not hunting for the pleasure of hunting but just to kill. You don't know the meaning of justice or fairness. Now get off my land! Get back into your boat and off my land as quickly as you can! That deer is not very far from here and so tired that he cannot move. Just as long as he will stay here, he will be safe, and I hope he will stay until this miserable hunting season is ended. Now go!"

Muttering angrily, the hunter got back into his boat and pushed off. But he didn't row back across the Big River.

"Elephant-Bear" Bones in U. S. National Museum

Bones of a great beast that looked like a bear, had feet rather like an elephant's, but was not very nearly related to either animal, are on display in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. The fossils were found in the Big Horn Basin region in Wyoming. The skeleton was embedded in a matrix of stone, says Science Service.

The creature, known to scientists as Coryphodon, was heavy-bodied like a tapir and not quite so high at the shoulder as an ox. It probably was pretty much "boss" in its day, some sixty million years ago, for its great bulk was reinforced by a pair of formidable 8-inch tusks in its jaws.

Coryphodon's foot bones are what especially intrigue scientists. The animal neither walked flat-footed like a bear nor up on the ends of its thick toes like a modern elephant. It seems to have been progressing in the latter direction, however, especially in its forefeet, which bore the greater part of its weight. Its gait probably was a slow shuffle, like that of the modern elephant.

In the same region where the elephant-bear flourished there lived also the earlier types of horses. The latter line has survived, while the bigger, more dominant brute has perished. The horse-ancestors made up for their lesser bulk and fighting ability by greater agility and brain capacity, and therefore greater adaptability. The elephant-bear, a massive, stubborn conservative, was beaten by a changeable world which it could neither understand nor get used to.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The Faculty Flag Pledge
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.

—I never heard of a law
compelling a private individual
in times of peace to take an oath to defend our flag and respect our institutions. Neither do I know of laws compelling
us to give public jobs to men and women who refuse to take such an oath or requiring us
to leave them in
their jobs should
they violate that oath. From the President of this
country on down,
the run of office-
holders must swear
to uphold the Constitution and support the government. Should any one of them will-
fully fail to do so,
the offender is liable to removal—
amid loud cheers! Then why not include teachers and college professors, those whose high task is to
mould youth into stuff fit for citizenship and civic responsibility?

Why should they be suffered to peddle sedition and yet go on drawing salaries from the public fund—
these people who claim they have conscientious scruples when what
most of us think they really suffer from is Communist biliousness? And for the students, as I understand it, the right of free speech
and the gift of free education do
not mean license to spout treason
on a campus or scorn America in
a classroom.

A red flag flits an auction sale, but I don't believe I'd ever get used to seeing it float over a district
schoolhouse.

Political Plagiarism

POLITICS certainly produces
copycats. First, the young Republicans meet, being greeted by a typical sounding juvenile, who's
the last surviving drummer boy of Shiloh. Then the young Democrats
come rallying as fast as wheelchairs will bring them, with their
breakfast shawls and their ear-
trumpets. The self-proclaimed
"young" leader of any party is usually somebody who hopes to set a patriotic example to his grandchildren and at the same time get the
old job back.

The Republicans hold a Grass-Roots convention. So this month
at Atlanta there'll be what you might call a grass widow convention for the revolting southern Democrats—absolutely too revolting for words, to hear Jim Farley talk. You see, they've been de-
forced, but the decree is not yet final.

Southern Democrats are great
hands for seceding and remanding
so every day in the year except
just one day. On election, they become reconciled long enough to vote the straight Democratic ticket.
Twenty minutes later, they're off
the reservation again. I hear a number of bankers will attend. That would seem to indicate a changing trend. For quite a while after 1928
very few bankers went to Atlanta
voluntarily.

Going Nuts in Hollywood

IF, WHILE touring Los Angeles,
you see a bushy headed, wild
eyed, elderly gentleman (nobody's wondering about that) jump to
soon at the conclusion that he's
typical specimen of our famous coterie of lunatics.

You see, they told out Los Angeles and I suppose on the great
plan of a double underhanded, and
the system of a double underhanded
further designed to encourage taxing insanity. So what you beheld
may merely be an ex-resident of the Middle West, who came out

here years ago to retire and bought
him a cozy bungalow and incau-tiously went for a stroll and has been trying ever since to find his way back home again.

Not all the nuts were nutty when they first arrived. Many of them
got that way trying to trace street
addresses.

Gen. Liggett's Passing

SO HUNTER LIGGETT is dead
at seventy-eight—the only contemporary lieutenant general of the United States army. For 50-odd years, he wore with gallantry and
with honor the uniform of his country.

He fought Indians; fought border-bandits; fought Spaniards in Cuba; fought Germans in France;
and, at the end, fought off death
for many dragging months.

I saw him overseas, commanding our splendid First corps, which he made more splendid still. He was as plain as an old shoe, and as easy to get along with. His officers respected him, his soldiers
loved him. They went where he sent 'em, and if they failed in their
objective, they didn't come back.
They went instead to report at the
sills of the judgment seat the reason why they failed.

They'll like him over there—Israel Putnam, and Stonewall Jackson, and Forrest, and Grant, and
all the rest of our real ones.

Great Rocky Region Made Up of Oldest Known Rock

The great rocky region that extends all the way from northern Ontario into northern New York
forms a single structural unit of
the earth's crust and is made up of the oldest known rocks. Geologists do not pretend to place a particularly accurate estimate on
its age in years, but one figure,
based on the amount of radioactive
materials in some of its minerals,
is one and one-half billions of years,
says Science Service.

This great rock mass, known to
geologists as the "Laurentian Shield," contains some of the world's most valuable metal ore deposits—among other things the
world's principal source of nickel,
as well as much gold and silver.
These as well as the predominantly
granitic makeup of the rocks themselves, are evidences that the formation came into being by the slow
solidification, far underground, of
tremendous masses of volcanic mag-
ma, which were subsequently exposed to the light of day by the weathering away of the mountain
ranges that once stood above them.

Mosque of the Roses

In Constantinople, or Istanbul, as it is called today, is an exquisite
little church known as Gul Djami (Mosque of the Roses), probably built in the Tenth century, when
the city was a Christian one. Here, in the middle of the Fifteenth century, on the night before the Turks
took the city, the Christian emperor
and his patriarch passed the night
praying before the final dawn, and
when the Turks entered they found
the church still garlanded with
roses, and so it has been called ever since.

Dove and Pigeon

The words "dove" and "pigeon"
are practically synonymous, but in ordinary usage "pigeon" is a somewhat broader term and is applied
to all birds belonging to the family Columbidae. Both terms are applicable to the domestic pigeon and
to various wild species, but some of the smaller species of the family are specifically called doves,
such as turtledoves, mourning doves,
ground doves, to distinguish them
from the larger species more commonly called pigeons.

The Great Dismal swamp, a

Once the rendezvous of pirates,

the swamp has much of interest.
One of its canals was dug by order
of George Washington, who
planned development of the area.
It is a wild morass the home of

gin timber still standing.

We say this because, before the

so-called "pain" remedies were ad-

Bayer Aspirin largely changed
medical practice.

Countless thousands of people
